The 2018 Ruth A. Allen Pioneer in Texas Working-Class History Award

Dr. Michael Botson

Michael Botson has over a dozen publications, including an award-winning book and several refereed articles in scholarly periodicals including The Journal of American History and Labor, Civil Rights, and the Hughes Tool Company (Texas A&M University Press, 2005). His writing has netted considerable praise, including the Houston Public Library's Julia Ideson Award, the Texas Historical Commission's prestigious Fehrenbach Award for best book on Texas history, and inclusion on Princeton University Library's Distinguished List of Noteworthy Books on Industrial Relations and Labor Economics. In 2010, he was awarded the coveted Mary M. Hughes Research Fellowship in Texas History by the Texas State Historical Association. Dr. Botson serves the history profession as a manuscript referee for the University of Texas Press, Texas A&M University Press, the University of Oklahoma Press, and the Southwestern Historical Quarterly. A Professor of History at Houston Community College, his dedication to the teachers' craft and to his students has been recognized with several commendations including the 2009 Chancellor's Faculty Excellence Award.

Luncheon Speaker

Dr. Max Krochmal

Max Krochmal, Ph.D., is Associate Professor of History and founding Director of Comparative Race and Ethnic Studies at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth. He is the author of Blue Texas: The Making of a Multiracial Democratic Coalition in the Civil Rights Era, which received the Frederick Jackson Turner Award of the Organization of American Historians and the Ramirez Family Award for Most Significant Scholarly Book from the Texas Institute of Letters, among other accolades. He is also director of the Civil Rights in Black and Brown Oral History Project, which received a National Endowment for the Humanities Collaborative Research grant, and the faculty co-director of the TCU Justice Journey, a distinctive academic and experiential-learning course on the African American and Chicano/a liberation struggles. An organizer and scholar-activist, Krochmal serves as co-chair of the Fort Worth Independent School District Racial Equity Committee and is an active member of United Fort Worth, the city's immigrant rights movement.
